Yuki: Hi, Mr. Smith. May I talk with you for a moment?

Mr. Smith: Sure, Yuki.

Y: I want to improve my English, and I decided to read some books written in English every day. Do you have any recommendations?

S: Well, how about reading some interesting short stories? Have you ever read O'Henry's stories?

Y: Yes, I read some of his stories in Japanese translation. I liked them. But I'm not sure if I can read them in English. My English vocabulary is still very limited.

S: Well, then, why not start with children's books? There are many interesting children's books written in easy English. What kind of books were your favorites when you were small?

Y: When I was a little girl, I was fond of books with animal characters, like rabbits and cute little bears. I also liked the Disney books.

S: Then why not start with those? Oh, and I think the school library has a collection of famous British and American literature rewritten in easy English. They should be fun to read, too.

Y: Oh, really? I guess I have a lot to choose from.

S: Certainly. And if you are interested in comic books, you are always welcome to borrow my English translation of "Sazae-san."

Y: "Sazae-san"? By Machiko Hasegawa?

S: Yeah.

Y: You mean, there's an English version of "Sazae-san"?

S: Sure. Japanese comic books are translated all over the world, now. I think "Sazae-san" tells us much about a typical Japanese family life.

Y: Well, it's rather an old-fashioned family life, but everyone loves to watch it on TV. I'm really interested in how it's translated. May I borrow a volume?

S: Certainly.
